CALL FOR PAPERS

The 2024 ISETS International Conference

“Boosting Energy Transition for Greener Economy”

November 1-4, 2024 —•— Nanjing, China

The International Society for Energy Transition Studies (ISETS) invites submissions for its 2024 international conference, scheduled to take place at Nanjing, CHINA on November 1-4, 2024. Nanjing University of Aeronautics and Astronautics (NUAA) will serve as the local host for the conference.

The ISETS annual conferences serve as a dynamic platform, enabling participants to fortify technical and business relationships, including research and development collaboration. These gatherings convene experts and leading companies to exchange academic frontiers, novel insights, advanced solutions, and innovative products. They play a crucial role in collaboratively navigating the opportunities presented by the energy transition. Through a comprehensive series of dialogues, presentations, exhibitions, and poster sessions, the conferences aim to foster mutual understanding and build consensus among a diverse array of stakeholders. This approach not only enriches the discourse but also facilitates a more cohesive and informed approach to addressing the challenges and opportunities in the evolving energy landscape.

The conference will address critical issues in sustainable energy transition and the global response to climate change. Its goal is to facilitate a comprehensive dialogue on the intersection of energy policy, climate governance, and technological innovation by bringing together leading academics, analysts, policymakers, and industry experts. This conference aims to foster collaborative approaches and innovative solutions for greener economy in the context of global climate challenges.
